

In Search of Talent

Deborah Zourdos, Council President

Over many decades, our American media has kept our rapt attention in a constant search for new and remarkable talent. For generations we have been glued to the television with a variety of programs such as Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, the Ed Sullivan Show, the Merv Griffin Show, late night talk shows of Johnny Carson and David Letterman, Star Search and, of course, the most recently, Dancing with the Stars and American Idol. We are intent on seeing first hand the discovery and the effect a newfound talent will have on our culture.

Do we ever aspire to be that source of talent? Do we dream of having our talent discovered? Do we have a talent that is under wraps and may remain undiscovered unless someone draws it out? Are we ever bold enough to advocate for ourselves, advertise our talent and make a contribution to our community?

Here at St. George, we are always in search of talent within our community. The ultimate goal, although difficult with our large population, is to find and unwrap the talents available from our ever-growing number of stewards. Our Parish Council is made up of 17 parishioners, and along with all the ministry heads and other liaisons assisting the council, it is but a limited representation of what we as a community are capable of offering to the daily life at St. George. We depend on you the parishioner to identify the talent(s) you are able to share. All too often we hear more about the monetary contributions needed by individuals, but the talent that can be shared is certain to create an equal impact on our parish family.

Our festival is but a month away. Chairman Dean Zuras (dzuras@comcast.net) is working diligently to organize all facets of the three-day event and Maria Mathios (Mathios_maria@emc.com) is heading up the volunteer recruitment. Our talent search is building momentum, but needs more contributions to encourage the expansion of our offerings. Please email either Dean or Maria, or see them after church on Sundays from now until the festival to make your commitment. As a special incentive, those who sign up by April 15th will have a volunteer t-shirt waiting for them at the volunteer check-in center in the Library! Sign up and show up, but above all add your God-given talents to our efforts.

Hebrews 13:16,

But do not forget to do good and to share, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

As our Lenten Journey brings us to the light of the Resurrection, I wish you all a blessed Easter and I thank you for your commitment to our church.

Special thank you to Arthur Lalos who recently donated his library collection of over 2,000 volumes along with bookcases to our community.
The collection consists of historical and cultural texts.

We are expanding our Friday lunch service to once again offer a “FAX Lunch” menu available to offices nearby.

Do you have an office that would be interested in ordering lunch from us?
